As fewer young people get married, the average age for marriage has of course gone up with the report stating: "For marriages of opposite-sex couples, the average (mean) age for men marrying in ...

Marriage is not for everyone

Daily stressors don't need to equal marriage problems, but they can exacerbate problems that already exist. When one partner has had a stressful day, they may be more likely to be impatient when they get home, they may handle conflict less expertly, and may have less emotional energy to devote to nurturing their partner and their relationship. When both partners have had a difficult day ...

But now, couples left and right are moving in with each other before getting the ring—thus, implying that moving in isn't necessarily even an implication that the ring is a-comin. And moving in together—AKA living with another person you are intimate with—is arguably a bigger step than marriage; you're implying that no matter what happens, you're in this for the long haul.

10 Reasons Why Marriage Isn't For Everyone; Here's the thing: I think marriage is great. For some people. For me and plenty of others out there, though, it may not be the right way to go, and that's really OK — despite a more widely held notion (held most of all by my mom) that my life, in fact, is not complete until I tie that knot. While there are many pros to getting married for ...

The limits of marriage : why getting everyone married won...

Our parents, brothers, sisters, cousins, aunts, and uncles don't need to know the details of every disagreement we have with our spouse. Marriage is hard enough without extended family drama, so we certainly don't need to add to the problem. We must be mindful of our tone and words.

6 Reasons Why Marriage Is So Hard

Getting legally married is like betting half your stuff she won't cheat on you. No matter what she contributed, or did not contribute to the marriage, half of your stuff is hers. It works in reverse too, if she happens to be wealthier than you, but in general, men earn more money than women, so the reality is she'll be taking your stuff. If you are not married, she has no claim on your ...
